Fifth Estate is a corporation and I am authorized to speak for it.

The Fifth Estate has no intention at the present of republishing at any point in the future any of the information included in any of the articles giving rise to this prosecution, either by republishing the same article or by publishing a different article containing the same information. The information included in those articles includes references to construction of so-called black boxes or blue boxes or similar devices and also includes information on altering, defacing or mutilating telephone bills.

It is our understanding that this case is being dismissed without prejudice and that if the Fifth Estate or its successor corporation should ever republish any of the information referred to above, the telephone company would retain the option of having these charges reinstated.
